

Sculpture Workshop: Shaping Transformations

A common underlying theme of the Congress is the question of how young people can come into an engaged, harmonious, and fruitful relationship with the world around them. The challenge is that both young people themselves, and the world we live in, are in a constant state of transformation. The goal of this workshop is to simplify this question to its most essential dynamic – that of polarity (student/world) and dynamic mediation – and to explore it, hands-on, in terms of the essential sculptural polarity of convex and concave.

The theme of polarity and mediation is deeply relevant for pedagogical practice; this workshop aims to stimulate a visual and dynamic understanding of this process.
